

Revera President and CEO, Jeff Lozon, Announces Intention to Retire

CEO leadership has built strong foundation for future success

TORONTO, Canada, June 20, 2013 – Revera Inc., a leading provider of seniors’ accommodation, care and services, has announced the planned retirement of President and Chief Executive Officer, Jeff Lozon, as of April 2014. Mr. Lozon’s retirement will coincide with five years at the helm of the organization, and more than 30 years of service as a CEO.

“Revera’s journey to build a pre-eminent seniors care and services company is well underway, and I’m proud of the work we do each and every day to help people live their lives to the fullest,” said Mr. Lozon. “The time is right for me to begin to plan the next phase of life, and I do so knowing the company is well positioned to lead in the sector and grow in new and exciting ways.”

Prior to joining Revera in 2009, Mr. Lozon held a 17-year tenure as President and CEO of St. Michael’s Hospital in Toronto. He was previously seconded to the position of Deputy Minister of Health and Long-Term Care for the Province of Ontario from 1999-2000. He has also served on a number of national and provincial committees and organizations, including Chairing the Canadian Partnership Against Cancer. Mr. Lozon holds an honorary Doctor of Civil Laws from Bishops University, a Masters of Health Services Administration from the University of Alberta and a Bachelor of Arts (Honours) from the University of Guelph. In 2009, he was appointed as a Member to the Order of Canada.

“Jeff has been a tireless champion for Revera and its 30,000 employees, with a strong focus on excellence in quality and service for those we serve,” said Paul Cantor, Chair of Revera’s Board of Directors. “We thank him for his leadership and look forward to working together on a smooth transition. Now our attention turns to recruiting an outstanding new CEO who will lead Revera into the next phase of the company’s history; that search has already begun.”
